FROM THE PREACHER'S DESK

February 12, 2023

I enjoyed my discussion last Sunday morning with Brett and David on the idea of worship. I also appreciated the questions and comments I received last week that you might want to see addressed. I will attempt to address them as we go through this series. The purpose behind this series is not so much focused on the things we do in worship but the attitudes in which we bring to worship. The intent of this series also is to challenge us to live a life of worship in our individual lives as well. I also appreciate the comments many of you made about the "order" (for a lack of a better word) of our service last week and especially the variety of things we did. In an attempt to not become stale or stagnant in our corporate worship, we will continue to keep things fresh by moving things around in different ways. Most importantly, let me just encourage you to pour your heart out in worship each week. The God we worship and serve certainly deserves it! Finally, join me in prayer over this series of lessons.

I hope that you received, in your email, the second e-newsletter that Melanie sent this past week. David, along with our ministry leaders and others, gathers this information to share with us each month. It is an attempt to let you know what is taking place in the various ministries here at Kingwood. In my opinion, it is a great tool of communication as well as a way to encourage you to be involved in certain ministries. Of course, if you are looking for a way to plug into the work here at Kingwood, David is a great first step in helping you. Enjoy the newsletter and let us know if you're not getting it.
